WEDNESDAY, JAN 9, 1861 We invite with especial argency the atten-

If the assertions of the address are true, it is wonderful to think with what saint-like patience South Carolina has borne to be trampled in the dust by her domineering eister States! The dead issues of the past are revived in this address, and the tariff is set forth as the great grievance of South Carolina, sofficient to justify her rehellion. It might be supposed, that after the unanimous condemnation of her factions course in 1832, South Carolina would not again come forward with the same selfish and reasonable propositions which the South and North together unanimously condemned twenty-englit years ago. It might be supposed that the statement, it is not, therefore, quite apparent. In order to show how regardless it is of the facts of the case, we copy the following telegram, received from the highest authority, from Charleston last night. Referring to the statement, it says:
